

Editorial

The International Tinnitus Journal is alive and now begins to thrive. This makes us very happy because our efforts during the past couple of years are giving good results now.

We are now issuing the first journal of 2013 and we will issue the second one on time next december. This way we achieve the regularity which is certainly very important for a credible publication.

We are receiving good papers from all over the world and this is specially rewarding for us because we want to be a truly international journal. Not only Europe and America but Asia, Africa, and all the emerging countries are encouraged to send papers to ITJ. They will be welcome and their papers will be carefully reviewed and published if they have scientific merit.

Our decision to open the journal in the web for free consultation and download of articles proved to be wise. Articles published in ITJ are being more visible and because of this more cited and we are now having a regular flow of good papers. This is also very important because we can review and prepare the papers ahead of time and this way achieve the regularity in publication of new issues.

We want to say thank you for the authors that are trusting their papers to us and tell them we know this is the most important thing to make up a good journal:

Having good papers to publish.

With your help we will make ITJ better and better in the next few years,

So help us God.

Best wishes for all our authors and readers from our team at ITJ.
